Speaker Background

Jeff Miller, Ph.D., is a member of the educational facilitation team with the Robert K. Greenleaf Center for Servant Leadership in Indianapolis. This organization is the leader in promoting servant leadership. He will discuss the principles of servant-leadership, examples of organizations who apply the practice of servant leadership, and how it can be applied to the workplace, the community, and to an individual's personal life. Southwest Airlines, ranked by Fortune as one of the most admired and best companies to work for, is one of the companies who adopted this leadership model. The servant leadership philosophy applies well to profit, nonprofit and government organizations. Mr. Miller will also be presenting a one-day workshop on November 1 and 2 for the Center for Ethical Leadership.

Center for Ethical Leadership

The purpose of the Center for Ethical Leadership is to develop and enhance ethics-centered and values-based leadership for individuals and organizations through information programs and consultation.

Quality of leadership is a primary factor in the success or failure of any organization. Those in positions of leadership have a direct influence on the level of commitment, motivation and performance of their organization. They are continually in situations where their judgements and decisions impact others. Managers at all levels can improve their effectiveness in any organization by continually learning new leadership skills and practices.
